From my recent trip around the Country I have seen; since I started breeding Lincoln Reds; the Breed has become far more uniform and standardised. They have good conformation, long lived, milky dams, good temperament, easy calving, good feet, excellent food conversion rates, easy to feed, finish and produce quality beef with flavour and marbling.

In discussion with newer Members, I asked them why they chose the Lincoln Red? above are all the reasons they gave.

to use the DNA information gathered from the bulls as a tool to help with the breeding of excellent cattle, perhaps even investigating the use of the genetics of the Lincoln Red female. This way we should be able to select the right bull for the right female and continue to produce the quality uniform cattle to compete in the future.

The Lincoln Red is well placed to be at the forefront of modern British livestock farming in the future. They are adaptable and can produce high quality beef from a sustainable low input system.
